Business credit demand is increasing slowly as business regains confidence in the economy.

Veda Advantage, which has a database of credit files for more than 14.5 million individuals and 2.8 million companies and businesses, recorded a 22 per cent increase in business credit applications in the June quarter over the March quarter.

While applications in the financial year's last quarter are typically up as businesses seek credit before year-end, the general manager of Veda Advantage, Russell Evans, said in five years of credit records, the average increase in the fourth quarter was 12 per cent over the previous quarter.

He attributed the pick-up in applications, after they hit bottom in February, to the impact of the federal government's temporary investment allowance that had encouraged small businesses to seek finance for new vehicles.

Also contributing to the higher figure were small businesses in the building and construction industries seeking trade credit.

The increase in applications for 30-day loans, hire purchase, credit cards and overdrafts, for example, represented the first positive improvement in 18 months.

There was a 2.4 per cent increase in credit demand in June over the same month in 2008.

However, despite these indications of a recent pick-up in the economy, business credit applications in 2008-09 have not returned to the levels recorded in 2007-08.

Applications for the year ended June 30, 2009 were down 6.6 per cent on the previous year.
